Business Law Moose Jaw Saskatchewan - We counsel clients in all aspects of competition regulation and antitrust litigation during company restructurings, mergers, and acquisitions. Such transactions are under constant scrutiny by government regulators. Our expert business law counsel assists businesses to stay true to their core objectives while keeping within regulations.

Amongst our clients are both national and international companies, whom we represented nationally before the Competition Bureau, in the courts and in the Competition Tribunal, and globally before several competition review authorities. Professional counsel is given on a wide range of antitrust concerns: international cartel prosecutions, complex merger transactions, and predatory practices involving pricing, marketing, and distribution. Our practice is diverse, involving representation of company directors and officers, manufacturers, distributors and national and international corporations involved in the financial, electronics, energy, pipeline, telecommunications, and textile sectors. We have secured negotiated resolutions along with the Competition Bureau for our clientèle and have dealt with both civil and criminal issues.

Merger reviews have been a major focus of regulatory authorities both abroad and here. A lot of the clients that retain our services, ask us to help coordinate pre-merger strategy and conduct pre-merger notification of transactions across jurisdictions. We work often together with competition counsel across the world, allowing us to lead negotiations and advocate competition problems efficiently on behalf of clients whose interests cross several jurisdictions.

We regularly provide clients with routine recommendation regarding business transactions to be able to prevent antitrust allegations. We provide a multi-disciplinary team of professionals to design compliance programs and workable solutions to reduce the risk of our clients facing anti-competitive behavior issues. Business practices and regulatory compliance issues are more and more coming under criminal and quasi-criminal investigation by competition regulators. We act on behalf of clients in the subsequent types of disputes involving relationships with customers and competitors: pricing policy problems like for example price fixing; minimum advertised pricing programs; promotional allowances and rebates; suggested retail prices. We have skill in distribution and marketing disputes involving territorial restrictions, exclusive relationships, and abuse of dominance. A lot of these matters have sparked a large increase in class litigation. Our litigators have a wide range of knowledge in class action litigation.
