

Wrongful Dismissal Lawyers Moose Jaw Saskatchewan

Wrongful Dismissal Lawyers Moose Jaw Saskatchewan - With a snap of your employer's fingers, you lose your job or are demoted and your life crumbles apart. Try as you might, it is not possible to support your family when your savings are gone and you can't find gainful work. If this is you, it is possible that you have a wrongful dismissal situation against your employer.

However, lets say you are the boss and you want to fire somebody but do not want to risk a lawsuit. There are several important questions which you need answered and a wrongful dismissal lawyer can help answer them.

A lawyer specializing in wrongful dismissal can offer many of the answers or advice which would help you throughout your hard situation. Our company prides itself in making sure that your rights are protected while assisting you attain your personal objectives.

When you sue for wrongful dismissal, the court compensates you for the amount you would have received from your previous benefits and salary. Then again, any pay or notice that you received is subtracted from the awarded amount.

It is your duty to look for employment once your position is terminated. The court considers your efforts, but will likewise subtract whatever income earned during the reasonable notice period from the awarded amount.

Like for example: If you only received eight weeks notice previous to termination when you were entitled to a notice period of 8 months, the court would compute the amount you could have earned at a new job and award damages accordingly. The courts consider moving expenses, stock options, vacation pay, bonuses, pension, insurance and medical plans when determining how much damages they should award.

In extreme cases, the court could likewise compensate an employee for experiencing defamation, abuse or mental distress after termination.